HARNSERING THE QUESTIONS - WORLDWIDE

One of Glassex's most popular exhibits - the new Harnser window crane, from Eazi-Lift - attracted international interest during the four-day show.

The Harnser - a portable crane which sits in the window reveal and lifts glazed and unglazed frames of up 100kgs - made its show debut at the NEC. Inventor Jeff Crowder was on the stand to demonstrate the unit's capability.

"Some say Glassex was quiet this year, but the Eazi Lift team was kept busy throughout the four days, with interest across the spectrum, not just from the UK but also from mainland Europe and beyond," says Jeff.

Whilst Eazi Lift has sole distribution rights for the Harnser in the UK, it is expected that distributors for North America and the Far East will be appointed in the next twelve months.

The Harnser enables installers working alone to lift even pre-glazed windows up to three storeys high. "It is clear that the industry is becoming increasingly aware of safety obligations under the new Work at Height Regulations which mean it is no longer feasible to carry window frames up ladders. It may sound corny, but Glassex visitors certainly came away with the feeling that the Harnser provides the Answer," says Jeff.

And they all lived happily ever after...
